Hi-Y Club Members At Supper-Banquet

For Express Benefit Of Prospective McGill Freshmen

The New Men's Student Committee, which has been formed for the express purpose of giving the prospective Freshmen of McGill University an advance notice of what they may expect during their first year at McGill, will hold a banquet on Thursday, November 9, in the S.C.M.

This banquet is being held for members of the Hi-Y Club of the city and for any of their friends who intend entering McGill next fall, and it is expected that Dean Ira MacKay, Lorne Gales and the newly-elected President of the S.C.M. will speak.

The announcement has been made that all Hi-Y graduates are cordially invited and urged to attend. This will give them an excellent opportunity, it is said, to see the progress of the Hi-Y since the Graduates have left this organization.

A nominal fee of 30 cents will be admission price to the supper-banquet.

Johnson Chosen As President By Arts Undergrads

50 Per Cent Vote Cast By Students Yesterday

ELECTIONS of officers for the Arts Undergraduate Society were held yesterday in the Arts Building. Arnold L. Johnson was chosen president, John H. McDonald, vice-president, Louis G. Johnson, treasurer, and L. Parker Chesney, secretary for the year 1934-35. All the offices were very closely contested. Voting was particularly heavy and the polls were kept busy as long as they were open.

The outgoing president is R. Malcolm Ransom, and Arnold L. Johnson is retiring as past vice-president. The former treasurer was David Goodman, and the former secretary, F. Douglas MacKenzie. The new executive will take office next year and are elected for one year.

First year students, who form by far the greatest part of the voting body, used 52% of the votes allotted to them; 53.5% of the second year students voted, and the junior year was not far behind, exactly 50% of their voting number voting. The senior year represented a slight drop in the voting, only 47.5% of the students casting their ballots. About half of the Faculty of Arts took advantage of the opportunity of voting which was extended to them. The total enrollment of this faculty is five hundred and sixty-four and two hundred and ninety students cast their votes.

Notice Arts '34

Will the class of Arts '34 meet on the steps of the Arts Building at one o'clock sharp today. The presence of Mr. Keevitz and Mr. Blaylock is also required. The whole gathering will then adjourn to the Wig and Pisle. No outsiders allowed.

Graduating Classes To Elect Officers

Organization Gives Permanence To Each University Class

Before the classes of '34 graduate this spring, a permanent class organization is most desirable; for, once out of college, unless a class has some permanent officers, its cohesion is very soon broken.

Such class organizations are sponsored by the Graduates' Society, and the Society keeps a record of each graduate's name and address and personal items in its files. The permanent organization of each class is effected by the election of a permanent president who is to be looked upon as the leader and convenor of the class in the years to come, and in order that each class may have a voice in the Society's affairs, the permanent president is an officer of the Society as class representative on the Council of the Society with the provision, of course, that, as an officer of the Society, he maintains his membership in the organization; also, it is expected that all the members of the class will join the Society which forms the only organized link which they have with the University in the years to come.

Mr. G. B. Glasco, Executive Secretary of the Society asks that each of the graduating classes arrange for a class meeting in the near future when he will be pleased to explain to them all about the permanent class organization, and at this time the class should elect its permanent class president. Class secretaries may also be elected at the same time, if the class so desires. For this purpose, will the president presidents of these classes kindly get in touch with Mr. Glasco at the Graduates' Society without delay — Architecture '34, Arts (Men) '34, Science '34, Engineering '34, Commerce '34, Law '34, Medicine '34, Arts (Women) '34, Dentistry '34, Graduate School '34, Library School '34.

Annual To Appear On Campus Shortly

Publication Will Include Memorial On Sir Arthur Currie

The members of the Annual Board announce that the date of publication for "Old McGill" is not very far in the future. The printers are rapidly receiving their copy and hope to have the publication under press in a few weeks. This year a novel design for the page layout is to be used. It is thought that this innovation will add to the general appearance of the Annual.

Subscriptions are being received rapidly and it is expected that the number of subscribers will be greater than last year. In this issue, a special memorial on Sir Arthur Currie will be included. This should prove of special interest to all students. Every-one intending to purchase copies of the Annual is urged to sign the list which may be found in any of the buildings on the Campus. This will ensure them a copy of the Annual.

Williamson Delivers Graduates' Society Radiologue Address

"Crippled Child" Subject Of Doctor's Speech Monday Night

TREATMENTS OUTLINED

Methods Of Prevention Subject Of Intensive Study

One of the last of the series of Graduates' Society Radiologues took place last Monday night, when Norman T. Williamson, M.D., spoke over Station CKAC. The subject of Dr. Williamson's address was "The Crippled Child." Miss Hall, librarian of the travelling library will speak on March 26th and Friday, March 30th. Dean Brown will deliver an address entitled "Engineering and Changing Society." These two broadcasts will bring to an end the present series of the Graduate Society has been conducting, a total of 42 broadcasts having been made since last October.

Dr. Williamson opened his address with a brief history of the treatment of crippled children, and of research in late years. By "crippled children" he explained he was referring to children who had become handicapped through disabilities and not to those who were defective mentally. Of the former group there were two classes, those who had become crippled through congenital defects and secondly, those handicapped through acquired defects.

Inherent Defect
There may be, Dr. Williamson went on to say, some inherent defect in the growing embryo which will allow the child to come into the world with physical disabilities. Club feet, Obstetrical Paralysis of the upper arm, wry-neck or Torti-Collis are some of these cases. Fortunately instances of these defects are rather rare and are found in only about 2 cases in every 1000 births.

The greatest proportion of physical disabilities found in children are acquired. Rickets is a general systematic disease due to malnourishment and is characterized by extreme bony deformities and predisposition to infection.

Inventors And Inventions

IT IS A strange fact that so many battles are being waged to decide to whom should go the credit of practically every modern invention. It may be readily understood that old discoveries should have been made by searchers unknown to us, as there were no means of spreading news in those days, and the same novel object may have been invented by two men in different countries, each being unaware of the other's work on the subject. But to-day the press, radio and all other means of spreading news have made it practically impossible for any new steps being made without the whole world's hearing about it. Whenever a new vitamin or hormone is discovered, everybody reads an account of it in the front page of the newspapers. Yet many modern developments, such as the radio, the automobile, have divided many countries into as many factions, each declaring that these inventions were due to one of their native sons.

That Guglielmo Marconi invented wireless telegraphy makes no doubt in the mind of any Italian. It makes just a little doubt in the mind of any Frenchman that Edouard Branly was really the first man to realize it. Germans cling to the belief that Carl Benz was the first human to drive a motor car, while in Paris a monument has been erected to immortalize a French engineer and it bears the inscription: "To the inventor of the automobile." A similar situation exists in the case of the aeroplane, whose inventor is believed by some to be Wilbur Wright, by others S. P. Langley and by Europeans Clement Ader. The situation will probably never be cleared up as most of the early aviators carried out their experiments under the veil of the profoundest secrecy.

In the United States it is taught that Thomas Alva Edison invented the telephone, moving pictures, electric lamp, gramophone and a number of other electrical contrivances. Yet Alexander Graham Bell has good claims to the inventorship of the telephone, while the French believe Lumiere and Pathe to be the fathers of moving pictures. The fact remains that the first true motion pictures ever taken were the work of Dr. Jules E. Marey in 1886. Howe in 1846 is believed to have been the discoverer of the sewing machine principle; nevertheless France in 1890 celebrated the centenary of the invention of the sewing machine by Barthelmy Thimonnier. Again no proofs can be found to establish who is right.

Foucault is claimed by some to have been the first to make a gyroscope, but others assert that this honor belongs to Elmer A. Sperry, as he was the first to make a practical application of it. The old standby "Who invented gunpowder?" will never be solved, as the followers of Roger Bacon and those of Berthold Schwartz probably overlook the much likelier theory that it was a Chinese invention. It is also strange how forgotten are the inventors of some of the things without which we could hardly get along. How many know that Walter Hunt invented the safety pin? that Blaise Pascal was the first to make a wheelbarrow? that Laennec devised the stethoscope? that Christopher Latham Sholes invented the typewriter? that Van Depoele and Sprague were the first to build a trolley car? Stevens, a screw propeller? that we owe the phosphorus friction match to Phillips? that Murdoch first showed that coal gas could be used for lighting? although the names of Nicéphore Daguerre and Jean Niepce as the inventors of photography are pretty well-known, nobody knows who invented some of the most useful articles of today, perhaps the most useful after food. The inventors of paper and ink are unsung heroes, as are those of movable type, the lever, the wheel and the compass. Since it is impossible to trace the creators of these objects, the next best thing may be to enjoy them quietly, without taking part in the controversies about them. It is a pretty useless expenditure of energy anyway, as the inventors are dead and any credit we may rightly give them, or erroneously bestow upon them will most likely leave them totally indifferent.

The Invention Of Writing

As a direct result of the desire for knowledge which swept over Europe during the Renaissance, I have devoted my life to the discovery of the invention of writing. In my researches I came upon this account in the dusty archives of Bronzeville, which, without more ado, I proceed to quote verbatim.

"—And don't forget to write." What common words are these, and yet what a meaning they have. What would the world do without writing? It is true that sometimes this is an onerous task but what would two young people do if they were separated, and could not write? Why, it is even possible for a man to be forgiven for his misdeeds during his wife's absence if he writes to her regularly. It is to such a man that writing owes its invention. I now present the story.

In our fair city of Bronzeville, dwells a man, Henry by name. He is a married man of regular habits. He dislikes tremendously to be told to do anything, but does not dare to express his feelings. His wife, a large woman of rather virile temper, is just leaving Bronzeville to see her mother in the old-fashioned, though once great, Stone City. "Remember, Henry," she shouts, as the train pulls out of the Bronze Station, "don't forget to write."

Unfortunately she has forgotten that writing has not yet been invented. Carefree, Henry returns to his office, where he immediately telephones Tom, Dick and Harry to arrange a poker game for the night. Finding that their wives refuse them permission, he takes his stenographer to the "Copper and Tin", Bronzeville's "newest and swiftest, and best" night club. An enjoyable week passes in this manner, and then Henry begins to worry. His wife is due back soon, and he hasn't written yet.

It is raining, and he sees a fly crawling on the wet window-pane. It leaves tracks that are easily discernible. These are in the form of a bee, and this gives Henry an idea. He reaches for his Waterman's fountain pen and copies the fly tracks. To oblige, the insect goes around in a circle, and then crosses it out—this is a second figure. Again the fly crawls—this time it is a box, with an arrow pointing beside it—evidently a sign for the primitive bronze railway.

Here, then, is the beginning of Henry's letter. "Honey," it starts, "the sun has gone out since you left." Henry now dashes out, and hires a set of performing fleas. He puts them on the window, copies diligently, and soon the letter is complete. He puts it in an envelope, draws a rock on the outside, stamps and mails it.

Here our story really ends, but I am sure that you would like to hear what happened to Henry afterwards. Well, his wife was so pleased with his invention and with the letter that she forgave him. Now, whenever Henry hears those blessed words "—and don't forget to write," instead of scowling, he grins happily.

UPON reading this absolutely historically correct version of the origin of writing, I was struck with several glaring fallacies. In the first place there is too much present day local color. Besides, Henry's wife would probably have suspected that he had been making Mary in her absence, otherwise he would not have tried to put her in a good humour by writing such loving missives. Moreover, she probably would have brained him on general principle and to maintain her prestige. More psychology and motivation are required.

Once upon a Time there was a beautiful Girl who lived in a small Town and was Good. In fact, she was so good it was Awful. And her Family was very proud of her and always told their Friends that she would make her Mark in the World because she was such a Good Girl and worked so Hard at her Studies in High School. And the beautiful Good Girl agreed with them and thought she was Pretty Hot Stuff and would raise the World's Temperature at least Thirty Degrees when she really got Going. And so she worked very Hard and passed all her Examinations and was Ready to enter College.

Her Family gave her a Swell Send-off on the Train and told her always to wear rubbers, but she was so Dumb in the Things That Count that she didn't get the Joke and went off to school with a light Heart.

And when she got to College she took a nice little Room in the Areveeca, and settled down to a lot of Work, because she really wanted to Pass in Everything, which was All Right, but a Trifle Stupid. And she worked so Hard that she never had time for any Dates, but spent her Nights in Study. And when Christmas came around, she Passed in All her Courses and went back Home feeling very Pleased with Herself.

Her Family thought she was even Hotter Stuff than they had previously considered her, and thought it would be a good idea if they were to do something to show their appreciation. And so her Mother drew her to one side one day and said, "You have done so well that your Father and I think it time for you to know some of the Facts of Life. So I am going to let you drink Coca-Colas with boys whom you haven't met more than Twice, and we hope that this Freedom will not cause you to Disgrace us in Any Way." And she kissed her and went, for the Good Mother knew that she was sending her Daughter to perdition if anything went Wrong.

Wrong

And so the Beautiful Good Girl came back to College and asked her room mate to find her a Nice Boy to drink Coca-Colas with. And her Girl Friend said she knew a Vairy Nice Boy who would take Good Care of her.

And so the Great Night came, eventually, and the Good little Girl hurried down stairs when she learned that her boy friend was waiting for her. And they climbed into his Car and drove off, and our Good little Girl was all full of Thrills and Heart-Throbs.

At a Very Late Hour the next Morning, the Good little Girl came back to her Room and found her Girl Friend Waiting Up for her, and she asked if she had had a Good Time. The Good Girl looked her Pal right smack in the Face, and said, "That Guy must have practised his Necking in the Yale Bowl between Halves. He's Lousy!!"

And the little Girl from the Small Town was very Popular, but not Good, ever After.

Good-Night, Kiddies! Stop playing with my beard, you brat!!

Dear Sir:

LOUIS G. JOHNSON.

The Editor,
McGill Daily.

Dear Sir:

There is at my hand a report in the Winnipeg Free Press, 14th March, headed,—"Woodsworth Not Allow to Speak to Student Group." The report continues, "Three days later Don Mario Colonna, Duc di Rignano, addressed a large audience in Moyse Hall, on the McGill grounds, in defense of Fascism, and in the course of his remarks, declared that parliamentary government is and should be a thing of the past." Just why an institution such as the United Theological Colleges should object to one of Canada's leading statesmen, is beyond my comprehension. And yet the University with which it associated can hear an address on Fascism. I can consider the University wise in doing what they did, whether the people agree or not; but I do feel, and feel very strongly that the same consideration should have been allowed Mr. Woodsworth in the United Theological Colleges. There is nothing either private or public about him, that has warranted such treatment or lack of treatment. The report above referred to, states that "when the students applied to Rev. Jas. Smythe, LL.D., Principal of the College, for the lecture room in which to hold the meeting, the principal told them that he would have to consult with his governors. Later he said permission could not be granted."

If that is what really took place, then it is a cheap and poor outlook for the United Theological Colleges. Perhaps they had better read Robinson Crusoe, Treasure Island, and Alice in Wonderland, so that their views and thoughts may not become corrupt. Poor boys, it is too bad, and they were saved a great deal of worry.

From a Canadian Institution of such distinction the whole thing was tragic and unworthy. Let us hope however, that she may have her lesson, and that on some future occasion that the heads of the Institution themselves will invite Mr. Woodsworth, as their guest of honor.

With these anticipations, I am, Sir,
Yours sincerely,
DAVID GARDNER.

Editor's Note:— Mr. Gardner seems to be misinformed as to the connection between the University authorities and the authorities of the United Theological College in this matter. We would beg to point out to Mr. Gardner that Mr. Woodsworth addressed the students under the auspices of the McGill Labour Club in the McGill Union, on McGill Grounds, and he also addressed the Arts Undergraduates' Society at their annual banquet. We suggest therefore that Mr. Gardner withdraw his insinuation as to the broadmindedness of McGill.

Whatever the opinions of those in control of the United Theological College are, these are not the opinions of the University heads. The United Theological College is merely an affiliated college, and is not a part corporate of the University.

STRAY WISPS By Clipper

In a survey at Hunter College, it was found that of the 650 Freshman co-eds, only one intends to marry after graduation. The others are planning to work. Whom?

A history prof at the University of Wisconsin interrupted a lecture with the cryptic comment that he didn't mind students who looked at their watches but gets slightly irritated by those who hold them to their ears to see if they have stopped.

A shortage of cheerleaders at Carnegie Tech caused this notice to appear on the bulletin board: "Cheerleaders wanted; must be intelligent, neat in appearance, honest, and diligent."

A week later this notice was substituted for the first one: "Cheerleaders wanted; no qualifications necessary."

will prove of great benefit to both audience and performers. The casts include many experienced actors from both the Players' Club and the English Department. Professor Du Roure, an actor of considerable ability, plays the title-role in "Knock."

Professors Du Roure and D'Hauteville, Mme. Furness and Mlle. Henri all take a part in the direction and production of the plays, and they announce that students are welcome on either night. Admission is free.

Students To Trace Recovery Measures

A. Bloomfield And M. Rountree To Address Economy Club

The last meeting of the Political Economy Club will be held Thursday evening at 8.30 in the smoking room of the Arts Building. The two speakers, Meredith Rountree, a graduate student, and Arthur Bloomfield, a third year honor student in Economics and Political Science, will read papers on "Progress Already Made Toward Recovery."

The first speaker, Arthur Bloomfield, will trace the course of world depression since the crash in the autumn of 1929, laying stress on the financial crisis of 1931, the agricultural depression, and also on the part that unemployment, production, prices, public finance and indebtedness play in the last few years running briefly over the economic situation in the leading countries of the world.

The second speaker, Meredith Rountree, will discuss mostly the progress toward recovery in Canada, touching on the phases of world prosperity which affect Canada, Canadian trade, unemployment, corruption and public finance.

At the end of the meeting, officers will be elected. Refreshments will then be served. The members of the staff have signified their intention of being present. A large turnout is hoped for.

The Gest Chinese

In addition to the Chinese language works, Mr. Gest has accumulated more than a thousand books in western languages, as well as many pamphlets and issues of various periodicals. The books and periodicals in the "China" section of McGill University Library are shelved for convenience in quarters adjacent to the Gest collection, and all resources of the University Library are available to students working in Far Eastern subjects, altogether, the contents and organization of the Gest Library enable the student to carry on serious and fruitful investigation in the main departments. For all standard Chinese works, old and modern editions, detailed, scholarly bibliographical notes for the various works are prepared in Peiping, with index cards in Chinese character for all titles. Based on books and periodicals on Chinese subjects in languages other than Chinese, the compilation of a bibliography has become a part of the regular routine of the Library. In China, Commander I. V. Gillis, a personal friend of Mr. Gest and chosen by him as resident Collaborator of the Gest Library in the Far East, has established and extended the field-work of the Library. Through the development of this foundation already well laid at Peiping, exceptional facilities are thereby created for future constructive work by active research scholars.

Arrangements are now being concluded for the employment of an appropriation of the Carnegie Corporation, placed at the disposal of the American Council of Learned Societies to support the Translation Project as an experimental undertaking. While the initial step in this project may begin with some section of one of the dynastic histories of the Han period (202 B.C.—A.D. 220), definite selection will be determined before active work begins within ten next few months.

tissues are New Growths, that is cancers. The acute infections, Syphilis and Tuberculosis, are found frequently in children as well as in adults. Cancerous growths themselves, are found in children but are usually of a virulent type and in spite of early recognition and treatment mortality is high. Syphilis will often attack the bony structures of a child and unless treatment is vigorous and prolonged, the child is likely to become handicapped. Tuberculosis frequently attacks the bones adjacent to its growth centre, therefore, operation necessarily has to be held in abeyance until mature growth has been obtained in order to preclude the possibility of a short limb. With earlier recognition and isolation of cases of open tuberculosis and the adequate pasteurization of milk, there will be correspondingly fewer cases of tuberculosis in children with devastating results. The problem is essentially one of prevention.

"Probably one of the greatest agents in the causation of the crippling of children is Infantile Paralysis. This disease is caused by minute organisms which in the early stage of the disease are found in the excretions of the mouth, nose and throat. Early diagnosis of this condition is often difficult and mild cases may be missed to pass the infection on to others. The lesion in Infantile Paralysis is in the spinal cord and permanent death of nerve cells results.

The withered limbs are not due to any inherent defect but to loss of normal motor nerve stimulus. Loss of growth also takes place in the limb which has been affected by Infantile Paralysis and circulation becomes sluggish. The Medical Profession have recently been doing a tremendous amount of research work for the prevention of Infantile Paralysis.

Crippled Child
"The burden of re-establishing the crippled child to the Community was for many years born by the Medical Profession, the Hospital and a few public spirited citizens but recently our work has been made lighter by the co-operation of Service Organizations, the Junior Red Cross and by Societies which have recently sprung up, whose sole aim is the helping of these children. Much yet remains to be done and our attention should be directed primarily along the paths of prevention and not of cure. Normal health is a state of the body and mind, which may be upset by many different causes a great many of which are preventable."

THE SIMPSON MONTREAL LIMITED

McGill, Moncton Ready For Crucial Series Which Leads To Eastern Title

Winners Of Local Series Will Meet Ontario Finalists Next Monday And Wednesday In Two Game Series — Both Teams At Full Strength For Opening Contest — Hawks Impress In Light Drill At Forum — Speed And Weight Big Factors In Eastern Threat

MONCTON'S mighty Hawks gave Montreal hockey followers their first chance to watch them in action yesterday at the Forum and they made a big impression on the fans who turned out to see them, although they did little more than work the long train ride out of their systems. Coach Percy Nicklin, the man who has guided the destinies of the Easterners since they were formed last year and who piloted them to the Allan Cup and the Dominion Championship last winter was at the helm for the workout but held his charges well in check throughout, preferring to let them take it easy until they swing into action against the Redmen tonight.

Moncton Fast and Heavy
Speed and weight seem to be the chief assets of the title-holders, from outright appearances at any rate. Every member of the Hawks, right down to their 200 pound defenceman Bill Gill, boasts plenty of speed, while the team is heavier than the McGill six.

Foster, Hawk goalie, is rated very highly but McGill supporters figure that any goalie that beats the McGill sharpshooters will have to be a master goaler. After the brilliant display that Edmond Archambault, fiery little Canadian custodian, put on during the Senior Group play-offs, McGill figure that they won't have to contend with anything superior to his work.

Bill Miller at Centre
Burrage and Gill form the Moncton defence. Both have been mentioned as the outstanding back division performers in the Maritimes, with whom McGill will have to battle their hardest if they are to get around them. Bill Miller, centre player pivots the first line with Connolly, former Montrealer, and "Nucker" Irvine flanking him.

The Hawks are carrying eleven men with them but tonight, in compliance with play-down regulations they will dress but ten, leaving Muckle out of the line-up and dressing James, McManus, Webster and McDonald.

Farquharson Ready
Bobby Bell was on hand for the workout yesterday but did not trot out his Redmen for inspection. The Red six worked against Les Canadiens Monday afternoon and the McGill mentor decided that a rest until tonight would leave his charges in top shape. Every member of the Red team is ready to go. Hughie Farquharson's ailing foot will be removed from the special attention list by game time and "Parquie" will be able to show the visitors some of the reasons why he is such a highly respected member of the McGill team. His running mates, Farmer and Robertson, are eager to pit their skill against that of the champs.

Captain Crutchfield, back in the form that has marked him as one of the outstanding players in the senior Group for the past four years and playing his best hockey of the present season, should be one of the best bets against the eastern threat. "Crutchy" is a speed merchant of the first flight who should be able to match strides with the best that Coach Nicklin can produce. His size and speed have dominated McGill games every time he donned his skates. Jack McGill and Frank Shaughnessy will hold down their posts with Crutchfield on one line, with Melkjohn, Elie and Hall looking after the defence duties.

Record Crowd Expected
Assured for several days of a capacity crowd for both games, it is probable that the Forum will find the largest crowd ever within its confines tonight. Capacity crowds in the Atwater ice palace seem to vary from 10,000 to over 13,000 but it is likely that the capacity will be over the 13,000 mark when the teams take the ice. Standing room around both circle and amphitheatre seats is being sold.

With Moncton and McGill ready to settle the Quebec-Maritime series, Dynamiters are ready to meet the winner of the Fort William-Winnipeg Monarchs for the right to continue eastward. The Fort William Blue Shirts hold a four goal lead for their second game tomorrow night. Hamilton Tigers, senior O. H. A. winners, have disposed of Falconbridge, Northern Ontario contenders and will meet the winner of the Ottawa-New Edinburgh-Westboro series. The Hamilton series will be played Thursday and Saturday, so that the Eastern Canada winner will be decided next week, the games being slated for Monday and Wednesday nights.

Award List For Session Presented

ATHLETICS are at a virtual end for the present year and the long awaited list of awards for athletic endeavour for the 1933-34 session have been prepared. The awards are based on the conditions laid down in the handbook, which require that certain stipulations as to playing time, etc., be fulfilled in order to qualify for the various classes of awards. Recipients of the awards are asked to bear in mind that it will be impossible to give these out before Wednesday, March 28, due to the fact that the Athletic Office will be busy with hockey tickets until that date.

The grades indicate the size of the "M" given. The shields indicate intercollegiate championship teams, who receive an "M" one grade higher than they would ordinarily have received.
